CONSERVATIONISTS: Jono Hills, Lolly Cornish and Alana Helbig are holding a comedy night to help raise funds for a scientific trip to Costa Rica.

Laugh for animals

A NIGHT of light-hearted fun at Red Hill is set to benefit endangered animals half a world away.

Tingalpa's Jono Hills hopes to raise $10,000 at her comedy evening ahead of a two-week volunteering voyage to Central America in January.

He will be joined by Paddington's Alana Helbig and Channel Isles-born Lolly Cornish, who now lives at Auchenflower.

The trio will help research teams collect critical scientific data for conservation projects in Costa Rica.

Ms Helbig said that could include schemes designed to save sea turtles, spider monkeys, toucans or native vegetation.

"I just felt I'd been very fortunate in my life and up until now I hadn't given anything back - it was time for me to do that," the 28-year-old QUT business student said.

"We will be living with host families so we will be fully immersed in the Costa Rican culture."

The comedy night, featuring Chris Wainhouse, starts 8pm on October 1 at the Broncos Leagues Club, 98 Fulcher Rd, Red Hill.
